Feb-19, 1927

Whitman Bailey - 1927
Park Row - (Stamford) - today's sketch. Mr. Bailey illustrates another one of Stamford's street scenes, and likewise we again see our city's traffic problem which in the last few years has been of great concern. The artist has featured the well-known Strand Theatre in the distance, while adjoining this is the New Palace Theatre now under construction. This later building is being erected by the Vuono interests. Many other important buildings and firms will be easily recognized on the right of Mr. Bailey's drawing, including the attractive home of Hartwell and Delap Clothing Company, just indicated near the right foreground. While on the left will be noticed one or two of the stately elm trees situated in the little park, which always adds great beauty to Stamford's civic center. Mr. Bailey made this interesting sketch looking from the window of the G and G Shoe Repair Parlor, which again caused great excitement among the employees in seeing the artist at work.
